What's Wrong With Inhalants?

Human Relations Media

VIDEO ---- Inhalants have been called "the invisible drug." According to a leading national survey, the use of inhalants is most common among middle school adolescents. This video explores the dangerous trend of kids who huff (breathe vapors through the mouth), sniff (breathe vapors through the nose) or bag (inhale vapors from a bag). Each of the four categories of inhalants are: volatile gases and solvents, aerosols, nitrates, and anesthetics. For each category, there are dozens of readily-available products, such as model airplane glue, correction fluid, shoe polish, pesticides, and an assortment of household cleaning fluids. The video reveals why kids risk their lives by sniffing these poisons, and emphasizes the catastrophic results that can... Pleasantville, NY 10570, Human Relations Media, 1995.
